

GANGS: A DEAD END STREET

- Spend time with each of your children every day. Show affection and make them feel special and important.
- Contact your local police department to find out if any gangs are active in your community.
- Children are attracted to gangs by their offer of friendship and support. Start teaching your children early from age 4 or 5 that gangs are dangerous and DO NOT provide POSITIVE support or POSITIVE role models.
- Teach your children what to do if gang members approach them. The best response is to walk away and tell an adult.
- Know your children's friends and families and your children's whereabouts at all times. Set definite curfews for your children.
